Fluke Warning

Liver fluke disease remains a serious threat, with deaths due to acute disease, and ill thrift and poor production due to chronic disease. Conditions through the summer and autumn have remained very good for fluke and snail development. It is expected that infected pastures will remain a risk until the end of December, allowing acute fluke infections to continue into next year.

We advise treating stock now. Housed cattle, which have been in for at least 4 weeks can be treated with an Injectable such as "Closamectin" (Fluke and wormer). Outwintered cattle should also be treated, preferably with a product which is affective against immature fluke e.g. "Tribex" or "Triclafas". Treatment may need to be repeated 4 to 6 weeks later. Sheep should be treated with a product affective against immature fluke as well e.g. "Tribex" or "Triclafas".

If you would like to discuss this further as part of your on going Animal Health Plan please contact the Office.

Good Luck

Good luck to Nicola at the start of her Maternity leave. We will be welcoming a new nurse, Caroline, in the new year.
